

'National Management Day'

The 'National Management Day' was celebrated by School of Management, ITM University Gwalior on February 22, 2020. The day was celebrated to recognize the importance of management profession in all spheres of human endeavor. The programme was attended by students, professors, Deans and HODs and the guests from Industry and was chaired by Dean School of Management, Dr. Vandana Bharti.

Prof. Keshav Kansana, HOD School of Management while delivering the inaugural speech laid emphasis on the need to develop capable managers to take the nations on the routes of development. The need of the time is that industry and the institutes should work in coordination with each other. Further he highlighted the initiatives by School of Management, ITM University Gwalior to train quality managers for the organizations.

The Guest of Honor, Mr Anand Bhanpurkar, Head operations, CG Power and Industrial Solutions Ltd. Gwalior made the session lively and interesting. He shared his huge experiences with the students on what organizations really demand from the managers. Today organizations have to focus on quality and quality means 'no tolerance for defects' and quality has to be customer centric. He discussed about the six sigma methodology and highlighted the importance of data in the organizations. He suggested students to be always on the toes and strive for excellence. The students also raised the queries which were very well addressed by the eminent speaker. Finally Dr. Abhinandhan Chakraborty from School of Management delivered the vote of thanks.
